An Essay on Man.

Man was made in dry weather.
He was made of dust.
Quite a number have never recovered from their creation; they are still dry.

It's man's nature to be discontented.

Adam had a monopoly, but he could not be happy without some one to crow over.

For awhile he knocked around over the Garden of Eden, and then went to the house, but he had to cook his own supper; there was no stove-wood chopped, and things were in bad shape generally.

The next morning it was the same way. He had to make his own bed and sweep out. His stockings were dirty, and his arm would go through a hole in the sleeve. So he was dissatisfied.

The next night, when he went to sleep, the Creator punished him by making a woman—a great misfortune to the race.

Pursuit in this case is said to be sweeter than possession.

After Eve got acquainted with her mate she vowed that all the men in the world was were not worth Adam. Goliath was a man.

He was a bigger man than Grant, but he couldn't stand as many slings.

The family man resembles the oyster on a half shell.

The shell is known at home—the soft side abroad.

Some men carry this resemblance in their faces. Many men have countenances like oysters.

Job is said to have been very patient man.

He had boils all over him.

Men now boil all over themselves when the preacher reaches "thirteenthly" on a hot day, and never think of the grandeur of Job's example.

It is natural for a man to disregard a good example.—[Boston World.]
